Getting in step

Don't sit out on this one, as dance festivals across the world get ready to draw the crowds in, says Tania Bhattacharya

TRAVEL 360

If you enjoy shaking a leg at the slightest provocation, how about taking off for an exotic destination to watch talented artists perform live — sometimes at touching distance — at offbeat dance festivals? Be it the Holland Dance Festival, the scintillating Rio de Janeiro Carnival or the annual dance festival at Konark, this is one quirky holiday you can't afford to miss. And fret not. You can participate in some dance workshops to get your steps right!

Here's a roster of some upcoming festivals:

HOLLAND DANCE FESTIVAL

The Holland Dance Festival, held biennially at The Hague, is the most spectacular contemporary dance event in The Netherlands. Each edition lasts nearly three weeks and includes international dance performances, workshops for professionals and amateurs and a 'dansparade'.

The festival is now on (since October 28) and will carry on till November 15. Top draws include performances by the Batsheva Dance Company from Israel, Cullberg Ballet from Sweden and Spain's Compañía Nacional de Danza. Prices of tickets start at 5 euros (Rs 350 approx.).

At Rs 27,375 per person on twin sharing basis, Cox and Kings has a four-night five-day package to Amsterdam. This includes 3-star accommodation with breakfast and taxes, airport transfers and sightseeing. For details, go to www.coxandkings.com. For overnight stay at The Hague, mail to info@hollanddancefestival.com.

DANCE CHICAGO

Celebrating its 15th anniversary this year, Dance Chicago has held pride of place amongst the world's best dance festivals. This year's festival (started from October 30 to carry on till December 12) will feature 130 companies and works in hip-hop, ballet, tap, jazz, ethnic and contemporary dance by talented choreographers.

Dance Chicago 2009 will take place across four different venues. Top draws include performances by Chicago's Cerqua Rivera Dance Theatre, Mexican Dance Ensemble and much more. Prices of tickets start from $15 (Rs 700 approx.).

Each February, Brazil is engulfed in a samba frenzy during the Brazilian 'carnaval'. And Rio de Janeiro hosts the best of them all. The next 'carnaval' will be held from February 13 to February 16, 2010.

Held four days before Ash Wednesday, this is a national tradition with samba as its theme. It's characterised by countless performances and street parades. Rio's carnival also includes performances at the spectacular Sambodromo (Stadium of Samba) by trained dancers vying for the top prize. The best part? You can always plunge in and do some serious samba, instead of watching everyone around you dancing away!
